

Information Technology Training

Project Overview

In today's world, information technology is a key component of the success of any country, however the high cost of education to acquire computer related skills prevents most of the world's poor from availing these high-demand skills.

Hidaya Foundation strives to bridge this gap by offering basic IT related training to underprivileged students so they might have a brighter future. Training is offered at Hidaya's own facilities or by offering financial assistance to acquire training at other locations where Hidaya does not have its own training facilities.

Much of the computers and equipment used in Hidaya's IT Training Centers are donated and shipped through the Container Shipment Project. These computer supplies and related equipment are also donated to other non-profit organizations as well as schools to benefit underprivileged students.

It costs approximately $50 for one child to learn basic computer knowledge. Your donation can give a poor child the tools to grow, succeed and live in dignity.

Donate by phone, mail, online by check or card, or sign up for our Automatic Monthly Withdrawal Program.
